CHAPTER I.

The Girl.

AM the happlest man alive! When a fellow's heart is literally bubbling over with accepted love it is difficult.

Six months ago I was a lonely bachelor, residing in bachelor apartments in Fifth avenue, at the corner of East Seventy-sixting of the Satirs of the East Seventy-sixting in bachelor apartments in Fifth avenue, at the corner of East Seventy-seventh street.

Now I am the happy possessor of a woman's heart! All mine!

Next Tucsday we shall be married quietly at St. Gabriel's Church.

But I must tell my story. I have tried ters, in East Seventy-seventh street, a little after 8 o'clock, intending to reach my office in Park Row not later than ".

I had purchased a copy of the Morning of the Morning are woman who presides at the news-stand at the fact of the fairy form of my charmer. Now, the rallway company is very persistent in requesting its passengers to give the exact fare, and rightly so, for it was my waiting for the change of my five-dollar bill that brought me to the green and white advertisement of the Hoi Pollol baking led dress and the pink petiticoat.

But I must tell my story. I have tried ters, in East Seventy-seventh street, a little after 8 o'clock, intending to reach my office in Park Row not later than ".

I had purchased a copy of the Morning fare, hoping to get past the ticket choper in time to sit or stand somewhere on time to sit or stand somewhere of its fare, hoping to get past the ticket choper in time to sit or stand somewhere of the my office in Park Row not later than ".

Now, the rallway company is very persistent in requesting its passengers to give the exact fare, and rightly so, for it was my waiting for the charge of my five-dollar bill for, a five-cent fare, hoping to get past the ticket choper in time to sit or stand somewhere on time to sit or stand somewhere of time the fairy form of my charmer.

Now the rallway company is very persistent in requesting its passengers to give the exact fare, and rightly so, for it was my waiting for the charge of my

When I returned home in the evening Mrs. Swift noticed my abstraction of mind and suggested a visit to the theatre-her remedy for all the ills of life. But I stayed at home studying Humphrey on the human foot.

The next morning I was determined to be on time.

I provided myself with the exact fare. I deposited my ticket in the slot precisely at 8 ociock, and then I twok my seat on the bench on the platform and waited thirty weary minutes until the merino dress with the black jets and the pink petticoat emerged to the platform, and waited for the arrival of the train.

To all appearance, I was devouring the news of the Morning Argus, but in reality I was gazing upon what seemed to me the prettiest little woman I had seen for many a day.

The light brown hair fell in tresses on ner shoulders, giving her a childlike appearance, although she must have been well along in her teems.

I have since discovered she was nineteen.

Swift, without the least effect.

Mrs. Swift's conception of love, so she says, is pirely plationic, and she seems quite incapable of sympathizing with the hair-splitting sensibilities of a reflicit into my confidence. I do so without hesitation, for I feel sure that among the housands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who was engaged in a law suit in which the housands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who was engaged in a law suit in which the housands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who was engaged in a law suit in which the housands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who all thousands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who was engaged in a law suit in which the housands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York is a lawyer who was engaged in a law suit in which the point as 10 whether the lady wore and thousands of passengers who ride daily on the Third Avenue Elevated in New York.
